

Learning Styles: Social

Transcript

Hello, my name's Kylie and I'm a Senior Teacher at Navitas English. Social learners like to talk, listen and communicate to learn English. Here are some ideas about what you like doing if you're a social learner.

In class, you probably prefer to work in pairs and groups, practice conversations and have discussions so you like lots of talking and using your English in group situations. When you learn new words and vocabulary you often try to practice and use them in real situations with friends or with people that you meet every day in your life - so perhaps at work or with your friends outside of school.

As well as your class work and your course book you might enjoy studying by watching TV, movies, videos and using English to communicate on websites like Facebook, Twitter, Myspace, Orkut. You like to make decisions about your study and you like it when the teacher asks what to do.

You don't usually worry if you don't say exactly the right thing or you don't understand everything in English. So you can get by without looking up every single word that you hear or see, and if you make a mistake it doesn't really matter as long as you communicate your meaning.

There are some of the things that social learners like to do when studying English so if you're a social learner and you're doing things like this, that's great.
